

The new code was actually longer even though I separated it out. What took the longest amount of time was getting all the nuances of C++. If I were to do it again, it would definitely take less time but because this was my first time doing inheritance with C++, it took a while. I am interested in seeing how my peers did the same work.